Tiny Tastes: Manager Transfer Documentation

Overall App

Luckily, there is very little management involved with Tiny Tastes, as it is mostly self-contained. The main responsibility of the Manager is to continue providing valuable content for the app as it is further developed, meaning custom-drawn images for the story book and other graphics, recorded sound bites, and great ideas.

Once the time comes, the Manager will also need to complete the process of submitting Tiny Tastes to the iOS App Store. This process is explained in more detail in Section 3: Getting to the App Store.

Providing Images and Sounds

When providing images for the app, make sure that the image sizes are not too big. Large images can easily crash the app or make it unstable. Image size adjustment can be done in various image processing applications such as Adobe Photoshop or Illustrator. Also, saving the images in .jpg file format will help control the image file size.

For animating images, the images need to have the same size, margin, etc. because the animation happens by swapping the images.

For sounds, make sure that the sound files do not contain blank noises before or after the sound.

Getting to the App Store

The process of registering the app to the app store is a bit technical. For more detailed process, refer to the technical documentation. You may need to contact Professor Lucic (lucic@cs.duke.edu) because he manages the permission to distribute the app.
